The Driver's Privacy Protection Act (18 U.S.C. § 2721 et seq.) (DPPA), which became effective September 13, 1997, is a federal law intended to limit access and use of personal information obtained from Departments of Motor Vehicles (DMVs) to only those with certain permissible uses. Since certain services may include DPPA data, users must certify a permissible purpose before using these services.

Select a Permissible Use Below:

- Involved party identified on report or person with express consent of party identified on report
- Insurer or insurance support org., self-insured entity in connection with claims investigation or anti-fraud activities
- Use in connection with a civil, criminal, administrative or arbitral proceeding
- Government agency, incl. any court or law enforcement agency, or private entity acting on behalf of Federal, State or local agency
- For use with matters of motor vehicle or driver safety and theft
- To verify the accuracy of personal information submitted by the individual to a business
- Licensed private investigative agency or security service
- I have no permissible DPPA use
